FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC. HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC. Jan. 14.—We have received no Southern papers

The returns at the medical director's office show a remarkable exemption from sickness among the troops for this season of the year. The following changes were recently made in the engineer brigade: Col. J. McLeod Murphy has resigned to take command of a gunboat. Lieut. Col. Clinton C. Colgate has been appointed Colonel from the 12th of December, and Major J. A. Magruder has been All of the 15th New York regiment.

The enemy are actively at work to-day strengthening and extending their defenses. HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Jan. 11.—Yesterday Captain Chester, Sergeant Grant and private Harris, of the 15th New York Engineer Regiment, were captured by the enemy about ten miles above Falmouth, on the Rappahanneck Major Cutting went over the river yesterday with fing of truce. The object of his mission has not been divulged. Communications are almost daily interchanged between the two armies, and flags of truce have already ceased to attract attention. The river is swollen considerably by the recent storm and the roads are horrible. Tonight it is storming again, and there is every prospect of a fathomiess depth of mud. All quiet along the lines.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE. FORTRESS MONROE, Jan. 13 .- The steamship Karnack, from Port Royal on the 10th instant, for New York, put in here to day for coal. Capt. Brogden reports that yesterday at noon he spoke the steamer Haze, which reported that her boilers were leaking badly. There is nothing new from Port Royal. The troops are very healthy. Gen. Hunter was daily expected there. The steamer Express, under a flag of truce, returned from City Point to-day in charge of Captain John E. Mulfrord, of the Third New York regiment, bringing down 215 Union prisoners captured at Fredericksburg and Dumfries.

The Richmond Examiner, of the 12th, has CHARLESTON, Jan. 11 .- We believe that the theatre of war on a large scale is about to be transferred to North Carolina. Stirring scenes are imminent on our soil. Gen. Kirby Smith and staff arrived in Richmond on Saturday morning, from the West. The North Carolina papers manifest much neasiness, not only for Wilmington and the country east of Kaleigh, but for the safety of the capital itself.

The California Cavalry.

Boston, Jan. 14.-Governor Andrew, in an address at the reception of the California Cav-alry to-day, said that he had this morning received assurances from Washington that the tender of the whole cavalry battalion from California had been accepted, and that notice of the fact had been telegraphed to San Francisco. The battalion will be counted as part of the contingent of Massachusetts. The Recent Attack on Galveston. Boston, Jan. 14 .- Intelligence has been received that the steamer Mary Boardman, with a portion of the Massachusetts Forty-second Regiment on board for Galveston city, heard of the attack while on the way to Galveston, when she was at once turned about and returned to New Orleans. Vessels Detained by Fog.

LOCAL NEWS.

THE DESTINY OF THE COLORED RACE, AS DE-PICTED BY ONE OF THEMSELVES .- What is required of the Colored People in their new po-silion— They must have more elevated aspira-tions— White-washing and boot-blacking not their normal condition—They should educate themselves and especially should "put money in their purse," to be appreciated by the whites-The growing prejudice at the North against the Colored race-The Gulf States destined for a Colored Republic-The allegation that the negroes will shortly be demand-ing white wives & calumny—The colored damsels fair to look upon—M. C.'s yearn after them and run after them—Emigration. but not compulsory emigration, desirable-Colored men not likely to be admitted to Congress or to seats in the Cabinet. Monday evening, W. J. Watkins, colored, lectured at the Israel Bethel (colored) Church near the Capitol. Subject: the "Duties and Probable Destiny of the Colored People." Rev. H. M. Turner opened with prayer, and introduced Mr. Watkins, well known to most of them, by reputation at least, and who had edited a paper at the North for seven years. The speaker commenced by remarking on the revolutionary nature of the times. The flames of agitation were now flashing with resplendent splender over the nation, threwing their light on what he thought was the final contest between slavery and freedom. Slavery is rushing down the dark abyes of ruin, amid the hosannas of angels. The people were asking each other what was to be done with the colored people? and it was time for themselves to ask "What is to be done with us?" They should rush out into the highway of human effort and responsibility, and ask not of the President or the Military Governor, but of God, "What must we do to be saved?" He would call attention to their defects as class. There was a lack of unity among them. If there was any people who should be united, it was theirs. Death and hell were summoning all their forces to grind out their manhood. The so called Southern Confederacy hesitates not to say that slavery is the normal condition of the colored race, and A. H. Stevens boasts that the Confederacy is the first government built on such a basis. They had enemies at the North and South, all bent on their destruction. They should unite to resist this combination. They may notall agree with him on the minute questions, but on all the leading topics they should unite. Their second principal defect was that they are not sensitive enough to the indignities cast upon them on account of color. Color seems to the whites to be unconstitutional, and their beir was not according to the statutes made and provided. The reason of this was, because they did not feel as they ought on the great questions of the day. If they possessed onefourth of the sensitiveness of the Indian, they would not have submitted to slavery so long as they bad. Their cries would have gone to Heaven long since, screaming, "Give me liberty or give me death," He despised the kind of doctrine." They should do as the white man. It is useless to prate of equality with the white man, and then lower their necks to reconve the yoke. They should by their action prove that they are men—they must be more sensitive.

Thirdly, they did not possess sufficiently elevated aspirations. They should elevate themselves, and not be satisfied as they had been heretofore in the so called mental positions. If they continued to monopolize those positions, every white man would have a right to look upon them as mentals. If he was comto look upon them as menials. If he was comelled to I lack a white man's boots, he would show him that he was driven to it by the prejudices of the white man. He would look it at him with his eyes. He was glad to see that white prople were coming down to the menial peritions—they had lately taken to blacking boots. A few days since he actually saw a white boy black a "contraband's" boots. Once all the white washers were blacks, but now in some of the Northern cities they had white white washers. This proved that white washing and boot blacking was not their normal condition. They must leave those occupations behind, and look for something better.

They were not sufficiently appreciative. They had not studied the signs of he times enough to appreciate their condition. He wanted a thorough change and not an amelioration of his condition, and would not be oration of his condition, and would not be satisfied unless he could stand on equality with any man, irrespective of color. If they could not effect the change here they should go some. where where they could elevate themselves.

It was their duty to let the world, and especially Jeff Davis and his companions in the Confederacy, know that they were de-termined to be free-to evince their determination and resolve forever to be free from the chains of elavery. They should give over all fears and act like men and women in the full It was their duty to appreciate the efforts of their Republican friends. He was a radical abolitionist, but was willing to take a half loaf from the Republicans when he could not get a whole one. The Republicans have done nobly for them; but, perhaps, after all, they had to thank the Democrats, for they were originators of the Kansas troubles, from which sprang up the Republican party. He was glad that the slave power was the argressive power, for if it had not been for their aggressions they (the colored people) would not stand to day where they did. The Republicans did not hate slavery at the commencement, but when, in Kansas, children with fair skins, blue eyes and flaxen hair, were barlered and sold, then the Repub-licans awoke. That party had placed Abraham Lincoln in the Presidential chair, and for what he has done they should call out "God bless Abraham Lincoln." [Loud responses of "amen" from every portion of the house.] They should not only be willing to live for Lincoln, but to first vote. They should educate themselves to a higher development, for they never would be able to compele with the white man unless they became a comparatively educated people. They had trusted to the abolitionists to develop them, which never would result in anything unless they took the matter in hand themselves. As a beginning they should educate their ministry.

It was their duty, while evincing their appreciation of the labors of the Republicans, to help them. They could do a great deal, for they were a powerful people. Now every eye turned on them. The newspapers day after day are, as they say, filled with 'nigger." The day are, as they say, filled with inigger." The newsboys were crying out a few nights ago. "New York Herald—Horace Greeley's swallowed nuther nigger." If they were such an a traction they were a powerful people. Many thought that they could not do anything on account of their color or hair. They could at least stand up and tread the monster slavery and prejudice in the dust. He despised the doctrine held by white persons, that a negro was not equal to a white man. He thanked God that in some of the Northern States colored people were allowed to vote. It was one of the proudest days of his life when he cast his first vote.

If all the pulpits in the land had been in the occupancy of educated ministers, then would they have been a different set of people.

They should enrich themselves—get money—for they would not be appreciated by the whites unless they did. Money was, after all, the principal thing.

After the abolishment of slavery, the northern people, who are now more prejudiced against the colored race than those in the South, will become more virulent than ever. Since the war had been in progress, colored children who had been attending a school with white children, in Michigan, had been driven out. In Canada the same prejudice prevailed. In Philadelphia, Richard Robinson, a respectable old colored man, was murdered by this prejudice, in being compelled to stand on the platform of a car, whereby he sickened and died. This prejudice was becoming more rampant. People now said that this was anegro war, and heaped indignities upon them. indignities upon them, making their condition intolerable. In Philadelphia, New York, and even in Boston, there was an antagonism to the colored race springing up, which they could not withstand. Some assert that the negroes are getting beside themselves, and shortly they will expect to marry white women; as if the colored daughters and sisters are not handsome enough and pretty enough for wives. Indeed, one would think they were attractively beautiful, to judge by the eagerness with which members of Congress and others run after them!

[Laughter, and cries of "That's so."] The exodus of colored people from the South would induce the northern States to adopt what some have already—a prohibition policy. Whether they liked it or not, it was so, and the somer they looked to this subject the better. He would not be content to live half free. He believed that the southern country—the Gulf States—will eventually fall into the hands of the colored race, and Havi would be believed.

of the colored race, and Hayti would likely be the centre of this great republic. They must prove to the world that they are capable of gov-erning themselves. He did not think that the black man would ever sit in Cabinet or Congress in this country with the whites. The whites were now dominant, and were determined, with the help of the powers below, that they will continue so.

He did not believe in the feasibility of the remodal of the colored people by force or fraud en masse from this country. They should do as the white man, and not go grovelling on their knees, but go out with the determination of making their fortune. It was not necessary for all to leave and help to build up their develop-ment, but let a number go out, and this fact of itself would go far to remove the prejudices against those who may remain. When their sails shall whiten every sea, when they shall be the producers as well as the consumers, when the whites will be dependent on them for cotton, rice, sugar, &c., then will they loom up in their full development.

He did not want to beg sympathy of aboli-tionists or republicans. If he could not be placed in position on an equality with the whites he would go somewhere else. He did not intend to remain here to be cuffed about by the white man; but if he could believe that the time was coming when he would be equal he was willing to stay. They all had an undoubted right to remain-as much so as the President. If the contrabands wished to go, what right had any one to say "Stand still and behold the salvation of God!"

Slavery has about breathed its last. If they would do their duty all would be well, but if not, their posterity would be enslaved.
